

Biography of

Richard Parker

Richard Parker grew up in Rhode Island, graduated from Rhode Island School of Design, but worked mostly in New York City as one of the Mad Men of the advertising world.

In New York he worked with Coco Chanel, the National Football League, Warner Brothers, the Association of American Railroads, and Lee Jeans, before retiring to Narragansett to paint and write.

(Webmaster's note: His fellow writers accuse Richard, one of the most multi-talented men we've ever known, of being overly modest. His biography is proof of the proverbial pudding. The only equivalent summary I can imagine would be if George Washington summarized his life saying he and a few guys once rowed across the Delaware.)
